These are groups where, as far as is known to researchers at present, there are no full-time Christian workers attempting to do evangelism and church planting.

This is a People Group with less than 2% evangelical Christians where an indigenous, self propagating church movement does not exist because there is no indigenous church capable of reaching the People Group without cross-cultural missionary assistance.

Since 1992, missiologists have defined people groups as "... the largest possible group within which the gospel can spread as a viable church planting movement without encountering barriers of understanding or acceptance." To date, FIT has concentrated on ethno-linguistic groups because language understanding has been the main barrier to the spread of the gospel.
